Top 100 Language Lovers 2015

(Hamburg, June 17th, 2015) Another exciting edition of Top Language Lovers has come to an end. Arranged by the language portal bab.la and the language and culture blog Lexiophiles, this is the biggest competition on the web about language-related blogs, Facebook pages, Twitter accounts and YouTube channels. This year, we had almost 1,000 nominations and a total outstanding number of 55,000 votes.

We are now thrilled to disclose the Top 100 list of Language Lovers and the Top 25 lists for each category. The absolute three winners will receive fantastic prizes offered by our sister site OxfordDictionaries.com, including one-year subscriptions to Oxford Dictionaries, Kindles, and books from the VSI collection.

The first place goes to DW – Learn German, the official Facebook page of Deutsche Welle: a must-like page for all those who want to be part of the German speaking community. Fluent in 3 months ranks second. This unmissable blog is rich in tips to hack language learning. The third place is awarded to Easy Languages, a YouTube channel hosting a worldwide project for language learning with authentic street interviews.

Top Language Lovers is a competition unique in its kind both because of its comprehensive aim to collect the best about languages on the web, and because of the central role of the users. Indeed, the users can both nominate and vote for their favourite blogs. “Every year, the contest is more and more well-known on the web and it is a source of pride among participants.” says the project manager Benedetta Montagnoli. “It is very rewarding to see the engagement on social media and the general interest about the selection of blogs, pages and accounts. I am sure every language enthusiast will find many useful gems in our final lists.”
